Ingredients

- 1000 g pork belly skin removed
- 16.6 g kosher salt
- 10 g EcoCure #1
- 7 g SavorYe
- 3 g black pepper
- 4 g smoked paprika
- 6 g granulated garlic
- 3 g onion powder
- 1.5 g bay leaf powder

Instructions

1. weigh the raw meat and record the weight. Enter the weight of the meat into the box that reads "How much do you want to make" on this recipe from my website.
2. Mix together all of the spices.
3. Season the meat with 100% of the spice mix and place it in either a vacuum bag or a zip lock bag. Be sure to scrape up any spices that fell off the meat and add those to the bag as well.
4. Measure the thickness of the meat. Head over to the website: salt brining calculator (genuineideas.com). Click on the "Brining Time" option, then enter your information. Once you receive your results be sure to add an additional 20% to it. This ensures it cures completely to the center.
5. After your pork belly round has finished curing, wrap it in a "Dry Aging Wrap". The meat needs to be a little tacky in order for the wrap to adhere properly, so you can splash it with a little water or wine if it needs it.
6. once wrapped, weight the meat and record the weight. I like to target a 30% weight loss for a shelf stable product. If you don't plan on eating this raw you can just let it age for 1-2 weeks but you'll have to cook it. Whichever you choose, write down your target on a piece of paper.
7. Spray the meat down with a protective mold (either mold 600 or mold 800) and place the meat into your dry curing chamber
8. The conditions in your chamber should be an average temperature of 55f (13c) and an average humidity of 80%
9. Once you hit your weight target you are done.
